D. Reading / 20 marks

Read the story. Then choose the best answer.

A school circus club is preparing a short show without animals. Each group writes a practice schedule. Ella begins at half past eight on Saturday because the hall is quiet then. When she was four, she could hop on one foot, but she could not skip. Now she practises skipping for ten minutes and balancing for five. Her friend Amir records the time instead of comparing who is best. After a break at midday, they watch a video of their rehearsal. Ella notices that she looks down too often. She decides to focus on a point on the wall. A small change makes her balance steadier. Practice helps her find solutions, not just repeat mistakes.

16. Why does Ella begin at half past eight? (4 marks)

A. the hall is quiet B. the show starts then C. she dislikes breakfast

17. What could Ella do when she was four? (4 marks)

A. hop on one foot B. balance on a rope C. skip well

18. How long does she practise balancing? (4 marks)

Our class made a breakfast museum with drawings and family stories. Mei described noodles which her grandfather prepares on Sundays. Her grandfather is the person who taught her to stir the sauce. Lucas drew pancakes with strawberries. He explained that his kitchen is the place where his family shares weekend news. When the display was ready, visitors compared the ingredients. They noticed that breakfasts can look different and still bring people together. One visitor could not eat milk products, so the children added clear ingredient labels. No breakfast was chosen as the only correct one. Instead, every family contributed an idea, and the class learned to ask questions respectfully.

The school walking team planned a gentle trail. Before they began, their teacher asked how everyone felt. Max said his knee hurt, so he did not try to prove he was as fast as his friends. He told the teacher and rested with another adult. The others warmed up and carried water. On the trail, they noticed that a longer step was not always better than a steady step. When they returned, Max helped record the team's observations. He wanted to join the next walk after getting appropriate help. The team learned that looking after a healthy body includes speaking up, resting when needed and choosing suitable activity, rather than winning every challenge.

D. Reading / 20 marks

Read the story. Then choose the best answer.

A nature group followed a marked trail near a waterfall. Their guide walked slowly because the stones were wet. Niko usually walked faster than his sister, but today he moved more carefully. The group stopped when they saw small footprints in the mud. They did not chase the animal. Instead, they observed quietly from the path. A bird flew across the sky, and the children sketched its wings. At the end of the walk, they compared notes rather than collecting plants. The guide explained that good visitors notice details and leave habitats undisturbed. Niko decided that moving slowly had helped him discover more than rushing to the waterfall would have done.

16. Why did the guide walk slowly? (4 marks)

The drama club needed a sea scene for its school show. Buying new props was expensive, so the children searched their recycling box. "Shall we make waves from blue paper?" asked Ada. "We could use cardboard for the boat," suggested Finn. Their teacher helped them check that the materials were safe. The mask was made of thick paper, and the boat was made of reused cardboard. A thin paper handle tore during rehearsal. Instead of giving up, the group added a stronger cardboard strip. They tested each prop before the performance. The audience noticed the colourful scene, but the children were proudest of how they had listened to suggestions and improved their design together.

16. Why did they use recycled materials? (4 marks)

Year Three organised a classroom celebration. Instead of choosing only the fastest learner, they discussed different kinds of progress. In science, Maya had learned to record results carefully. In history, Theo had started asking questions about evidence. Their teacher said they should explain each award with a real example. The group should not give prizes only to close friends. One pupil suggested a teamwork award for the geography project. Another suggested an improvement award for revising a story after feedback. The children wrote short speeches and checked that every compliment was specific. At the celebration, they discovered that useful feedback describes an action people can repeat, not a label that tells them they are simply clever.

Read the story. Then choose the best answer.

The class interviewed people about their work. Eva spoke to an engineer who designs safer bridges. "What is she like?" asked her partner. Eva explained that the engineer was patient and curious. "What does she look like?" was a different question: she had short hair and wore glasses. The engineer said that when a design fails a test, her team studies the results. If a bridge model bends too much, they change its structure and test it again. Eva had thought engineers always knew the answer immediately. Now she understood that asking questions and working responsibly were important skills. For her dream-job poster, she wrote about the habits she could practise now, not just the job title she liked.

16. Who did Eva interview? (4 marks)

A. a nurse B. a pilot C. an engineer

17. What describes the engineer's personality? (4 marks)

A. a blue jacket B. patient and curious C. short hair and glasses

18. What does her team do after a failed test? (4 marks)

A. hide the results B. study results and improve C. stop every project

19. What surprised Eva? (4 marks)

A. work is always easy B. bridges need no tests C. engineers do not always know immediately

20. What does Eva put on her poster? (4 marks)

A. only a uniform B. habits she can practise now C. only a salary

D. Reading / 20 marks

Read the story. Then choose the best answer.

A family is planning a city visit for Grandma's birthday. They are going to start at the station and walk past the museum. Then they are going to go through a wide gate into the riverside garden. The shortest route crosses a bridge with steep steps, so they choose a longer route which is easier for Grandma to use. Aisha marks places to rest on the map. Her brother checks the weather and opening times. They are not going to rush through every attraction. Instead, each person chooses one place and explains why it matters. Their guide includes clear directions, rest stops and an alternative plan for rain. A good city break works for the people taking it.

16. Why are they planning a city visit? (4 marks)

A. a sports final B. a school exam C. Grandma's birthday

17. What will they walk past? (4 marks)

Read the story. Then choose the best answer.

Before the hiking trip, Sam checked his backpack with an adult. He packed water, a coat and a simple map. When the group reached the meeting point, the guide explained the route and the weather plan. Sam was excited because the landscape looked different from his town. After they crossed a small bridge, they stopped at a marked rest area. The walk was tiring, so they drank water and rested before continuing. Sam found the compass interesting, but he did not leave the group to test it alone. When they returned, everyone shared one discovery and one useful preparation. Sam wrote that an exciting journey is better when people respect the place, follow the plan and look after one another.
